Bihar

Golghar

📍 Located In Ashok Rajath, Patna

Built back in 1786 under the commands of the erstwhile Governor General of India, Warren Hastings, Golghar was aimed at serving as a gigantic granary to store grains that can be utilized at the time of potential famine. However, the said purpose was never met and at present Golghar serves as one of the famous historical monuments in Bihar. Resembling a beehive, this building features no pillars, but a spiral staircase having 145 steps that take you to the topmost part of the dome.

Bengal

Sundarban

📍 Located In Kolkata, West Bengal

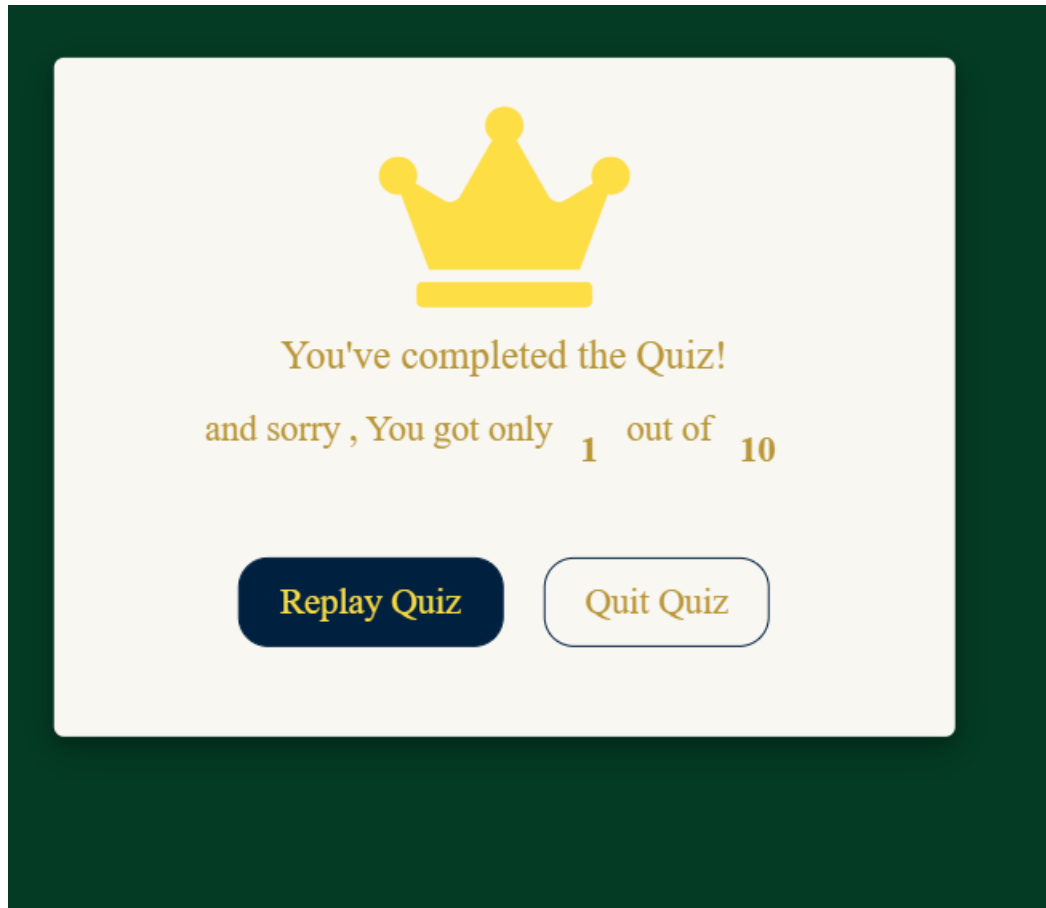

This UNESCO World Heritage Site is the biggest mangrove eco-arrangement in the world. Home to one of India's most notorious untamed life species, the Royal Bengal Tiger, it is also the world's biggest estuarine woods befuddled by many streams and tributaries, converged by a system of tidal conduits and a maze of little mangrove islands. This interconnectedness makes The Sundarbans one of the most appealing and charming spots on earth. At present this extraordinary land is home to 250 tigers and an assortment of birds, reptiles, and various invertebrates including crocodiles. This natural heaven is situated about 110 km from Kolkata.
